

WOMAN'S WORLD AND WORK . . .

No puttering, no muttering, No wall of vain regret, With eyes upon the evening star He watched his life's sunset.

And even as he would have wished, With ever ready jest, He turned aside from teeming life To that far-country quest.

No darkling Styx, no beatman pair, Just love and life and light. And from the real and human things He turned with glad good-night.

Big brain and ever kindly heart, Have ceased the work, well done. The Great Adventure of his dreams. At last he has begun -Frank Fair.
